Little Water St. And Smoke Nuisance

Subjects Which Caused Much Discussion Before The Board of Trade-Widening of One and Abatement of Other Advocated.

Several matters of special interest, among the most important being the proposed widening of Little Water street, was before the September meeting of the board of trade, which was held Monday evening at the Buckingham Memorial. After a lengthy discussion of the subject, the vote of the fifty men present was in favor of referring the question of the widening of the street to the court of common council for investigation, consideration and action, provided the council make manufacturers to locate, but they do not offer them money, but make the place so desirable that man-ufacturers want to locate. From this there might be a lesson to Norwich, said Mr. Havlland, and he thought it hardly a good plan to attempt to buy companies to come here, and our ex-periences in the past had not been encouraging along that line. He said that the meeting was to take up some civic questions and he called for Sec-retary Tibbits to read the minutes of retary Floots to read the minutes of two previous meetings. These were read and approved.

President Haviland mentioned that the new industries committee had been doing a good deal of work, but as Chairman L. R. Church was not present there was no report.

Little Water Street.

The president brought up the mat-ter of widening Little Water street, which had been put into the hands of the public improvements committee for consideration. Mr. Haviland described the street as the main artery of trade east to west, but at one point it was only wide enough just to al-low two w agons to stand from curb to curb. Since the Lucas building fire, it seemed like an opportunity to widen this street, and he called for report from the public improvenents committee.

Chairman J. D. Hall made an ex-tended report, stating that two mat-ters had been placed in their hands, the grailroad smoke nuisance and the Little Water street widening. He first mentioned that the crossing at the Main and Market streets corner, which had been an old matter before the board of trade, was to be changed, doing away with as much of the grade as

Mr. Hail spoke of his personal ob-servation of traffic through Little Wa-ter street, where he had often seen a complete stoppage of heavy teams, and he enlarged upon the heavy teamo'clock Monday morning. He had been in poor health for some time and was seriously ill for a month. He was born in Ireland and was the son of James and Margaret Shugrue. He came to this country as a boy and lived in New York and other cities for a short time before coming to Norwich. He was for years employed by the Chelsea Paper company and later worked for J. O. Landon. During the past year he was not employed. He was married to Ellen Connell in St. Mary's church by Rev. Father Mullen. His wife passed away 17 years ago. He was a member of St. Mary's church and took an active interest in the affairs of the church.

He was a man whose interests centred and took an active interest centred was man whose interests centred was man whose interests centred was man whose interests centred was a man whose interests centred was and other teams. The cost would be the difficulty of widening Little Water street, where it oppose to freaty teams, and he enlarged upon the heavy teams, and he enlarged upon the heavy teams, and h and the Central wharf merchants. He said Mr. Shannon was willing to do what he was wanted to do, but he wanted to be paid for it. A suggested line 3 feet in from the point in the Shannon sidewalk would take off about half the Cassidy property on the Market-Water street corner and a large part of the Potter property. Mr. Hall said he thought the board of trade ought to ask the proper city-authorities to take steps to accomplish this improvement, and he pre-sented a resolution directed to the court of common council, uring that they take the matter into considera-tion and take steps to bring this improvement before a city meeting, if the improvement was found feasible and possible at a moderate cost. Referred to Common Council. W. S. Alling asked if a part of the ackel property on the opposite corner ould not be taken off and the Shan non sidewalk elbow taken off to better effect in widening the street. Mr. Hall replied by telling of a pre-

Frank J. King moved the adoption of the resolutions offered. One Way Street.

A. S. Spalding remarked that it was an easy thing for the Board of Trade to vote this and then for the same men to vote against the extra tax it would mean, and he suggested making the street a one-way street, with travel only from the east, and he thought we might get an electric switching en-gine here and he had also known of cities, he said, where ordinances were passed prohibiting the burning of soft

Cary spoke for the widening f Little Water street, saying that we were also trying to relieve conges tion in Main street, so that to make Little Water street a one-way street would only increase the congestion on Main street. He thought the whole improvement would cost probably $20.-000, but there was no street in the city where the money could be spent to bet-ter advantage. We had the precedent once before of spending $50,000 in one year for widening streets. Frank H. Smith also favored the resolution and said it had been a great mistake not to widen the street at the previous opportunity. The resolution was estried by President J. D. Haviland called the meeting to order shortly after eight o'clock, speaking with satisfaction of the good number attending the meeting, and mentioning some things that had attracted his attention in Glens Falls, N. Y. where he had been this summer and where a business man had told him that they tried to make it a good home for people to come to live in, and have done everything to induce manufacturers to locate, but they do not offer them, money, but make the place so desirable that manufacturers want to locate. He thought the use of hard coal was the most feasible thing because electrification would affect the line all the way to Taftville and be very expansive. ery expensive. He also suggested hat an oil engine might be used.

Referred Back to Committee. On motion of C. E. Whitney it was voted referred back to the public improvement committee, R. W. Perkins advising that they persist in their efforts and C. H. Haskell advising that a committee visit the New Haven road officer at New Haven

He presented a resolu-tion which was passed endorsing the objects of the Embassy association.

Playgrounds Association. As to the railroad smoke nuisance at the rear of Shetucket street, he stated that others had petitioned the road for an abatement of this nuisance before the committee got to work but there had been no appreciable result in a diminution of the nuisance.

Mr. Hall read a letter the committee had written to General Manager Higgins suggesting oil power or the taking the suggestion.

J. B. He solicited the interest of the members in this object and was applauded as he closed.

The meeting adjourned about 9.45 and President Haviland invited the men to step across the hall, where A. S. Spalding and the entertainment committee had made provision for the refreshment of the inner man. Sand-wiches, doughnuts and coffee were on the tables, and as a special complimentary treat there were delicious muskmelons from Charles F. Lillibridge's farm on the Scotland road. GAME FROM GILBERT Will Play the Winner of the Arnold Haskell Match.

Playing off their match in the first round of the local tennis tourney at the Roque club grounds, Cary and Gilbert provided one of the hardest fought matches of the tourney so far, Cary eventually winning on Monday afternoon, 6-0, 3-6, 6-4.

The match was full of long railies and deuce games, with one or the other of the two players coming back strong at different times after he was apparently beaten. In the last set Cary needed but one point at one time to win the game, set and match, 6-3, but Gilbert pulled out of the hole, forced the game to deuce and then won it, forcing Cary to play another game before he was able to finish the match. Cary made a rushing start and took the first set of the match without allowing Gilbert a game. Gilbert then came into the running after the second set stood at 3 all in games. He won it 6-3.

Entering the third and deciding set, it again looked all Gilbert as he quickly ran it up to 3-0, but here Cary took a brace and Gilbert did not see another game till Cary had him 5-3 with only one point needed for Cary to run out a brace and Gilbert did not see another game tiff Cary had him 5-3 with only one point needed for Cary to run out the match. Gilbert staved off defeat by a rally at this point, but Cary played steadily and took the next game and the match. This puts him in position in the second round to play the winners of the Arnold-Haskell match. It is expected that these two will not be able to meet before Thursday.
